The Department of English of Arts, Commerce and Science College, Satral organised Soft Skill Training Programme for the benefit of the final year students. Mr. N. D. The Soft Skill Training Program for Undergraduate (UG) students aimed to equip students with essential soft skills necessary for personal and professional development. Students learned effective verbal and written communication techniques, including public speaking and email etiquette. Participants engaged in group activities and discussions to foster teamwork and cooperation. Regular assessments and practical exercises were conducted to measure students' progress. The Soft Skill Training Programme successfully equipped students with essential life skills. These skills are vital for their personal development, academic success, and future careers. The positive impact of the programme on students' communication, teamwork, leadership, time management, problem-solving, and emotional intelligence was evident throughout the duration of the training. Without moral support and cooperation of the Principal, Vice-Principal and the staff of our college, this programme would not be successful.

A Report of Training on Use ICT Tools

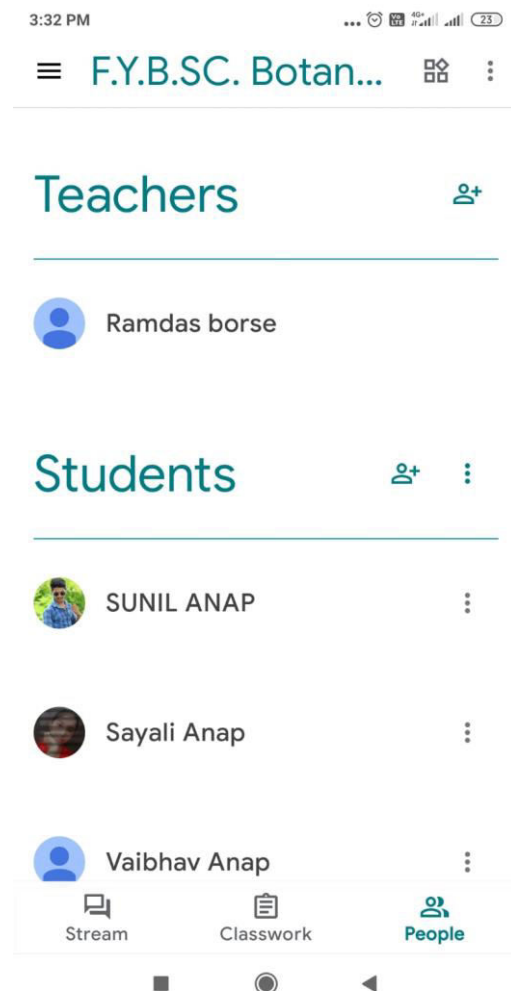

The Department of Botany continuously uses information and communication technology (ICT) in the classroom. The main aim of ICT tools is to enable students to learn and apply the necessary skills. ICT is designed to help students become competent and confident users who can apply the basic knowledge and skills they have acquired in their daily lives. It should also prepare students for the world of tomorrow. Pupils' interest in ICT learning is increased. Understanding the current visual study is more effective in understanding difficult aspects. ICT in the classroom improves engagement and knowledge. Students can watch the recorded lecture at any time. This is because technology provides different ways to teach the same things in different ways, making it more fun.

Examining the issues and challenges associated with the use of information and communication technologies (ICT) in teaching and learning can help teachers overcome the obstacles and become successful technology users. Google Classroom is, as the name suggests, a virtual classroom that makes learning easy and fun. Teachers can integrate educational applications or websites and create interactive assignments. All in all, Google Classroom offers a complete solution for online teaching. All the teachers in our department used information and communication technology (ICT) tools such as Google Classroom, MS Word, MS Excel and Google Chrome etc. Students also did a subjective seminar on PowerPoint presentations. The pandemic has forced the sector to move to a virtual and blended learning mode. Information and Communication Technology (ICT) has helped the sector to survive and adapt to the new possibilities of online learning. There has been a proactive approval.
